Eyes to Burma provides direct aid to a group of approximately four hundred Burmese refugees living and working on a garbage dump in Mae Sot, Thailand. The people who live at the dump, even the children, earn meager livings from picking recyclable plastic from the garbage. Many in the community sustain themselves only at subsistence levels.

Our role is to assist when aid is needed. We supply basic essentials, including clean water, supplemental food, clothing, shelter, and work tools, when the incomes of the dump’s residents fall short.

We also have an on-site community center, provide first aid, offer transportation to markets and to medical facilities, as well as provide access to education at our community center and local schools.

If you are inspired to help, please spread the word about our efforts and help raise money for the children and families living at the dump. Every dollar donated to ETB goes directly to support this community. ETB is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization with board members and staff located in Ashland, Oregon. We are all unpaid volunteers. Daily assistance to the refugees at the dump is provided by ETB’s founder Fred Stockwell, who lives in Mae Sot full time.
